

CS3: The Slavonic Languages
Dr. K. Richardson
Part II

Reading List: General References

This is a basic preliminary reading list. It is supplemented by additional readings for supervision assignments. Those works marked by an asterisk form the core reference materials for this paper.

Set texts

There are set Old Church Slavonic texts for this paper. These change from year to year and will be provided to students in lectures. We will use a number of texts from:

Whitfield, F. 2004. Old Church Slavic Reader. Oakland, CA: Berkeley Slavic Specialties.

Recent Bibliography of Slavonic Linguistics

Genis, R. and T. Sijmen, T. 2015. Bibliography of Slavic Linguistics 2000-2014 (3 volumes). Leiden: Brill. [MML Library: O1.SL3.7]

[This bibliography covers some 67,000 publications and gives an overview of the field since the beginning of this century. It is thematically organised and geographically ordered into General, South, West and East Slavic].

Students are strongly advised to take a look at an introductory linguistics textbook and read the chapters on phonetics and phonology before lectures begin for this paper. Any textbook will cover the basics. Two suggestions are:

- Radford, A, and M. Atkinson, et. al. 2009. Linguistics: An Introduction. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- O'Grady, W., J. Archibald and F. Katamba. 2011. Contemporary Linguistics: An Introduction. London/Munich: Pearson.
